Getting Old Brooklyn "Connected"

by Robyn Sandys robyns@oldbrooklyn.com

Ward 13 in the City of Cleveland is about 4.5 square miles and approximately 11,000 households along with thousands of businesses. They along with visitors to the area will soon have access wirelessly to the Internet an amazing resource that connects one to a much bigger world beyond Old Brooklyn.

Over the coming weeks local residents will be seeing access units put up around town. They are the transmitters for the wireless system and they will be mounted on street lights and traffic signals and maybe even a rooftop or two. The teams that will put up this equipment have noted that there will be eight clusters located around Old Brooklyn in higher up elevations. Each of the eight sites will "talk" to 24-32 access points. So there will be between 192 and 256 access point transmitters distributed throughout the area.

Those that live on the edges of Ward 13 will probably have some access to the wireless system. The details on how to actually connect once the system is ready will be featured in upcoming articles of the Old Brooklyn News as well as on the Old Brooklyn Connected web site, www.old-brooklynconnected.com.

The plan as of now is to start the first cluster at Estabrook Recreation Center. After this first cluster is evaluated then they will continue to complete the entire system. The goal is to have the entire network up and running during the beginning of 2011.

While the hardware is being installed, Old Brooklyn CDC is meeting with residents and business owners around their particular needs and uses for the internet. One session was held in late September. Some of the ideas discussed for the special web site to be developed for "Old Brooklyn Connected" came from participants at this meeting.

Grace Church

For example, they are excited about following some local sports teams that don't get much coverage in the traditional media like the Lake Erie Barons. Another person is a tour guide for a bus company that goes around the country and she wants to have easy access to information about the places she travels so she can let her bus riders know interesting facts. Others expressed their desire to watch their favorite TV shows and movies from the Internet. Some discussed taking classes at Tri-C which are offered on-line.

Some of the fun ideas that were shared included: listing garage sales, sharing special interests like bike riding or collecting cars. Looking for local jobs was a hot topic as well

A major part of this program is helping people learn how to use a computer and the Internet. A new program called "Connect Your Community" provides free training for adults along with affordable computers and Internet service for those outside of Ward 13 or until this areas wireless system is up and running.

For more information regarding classes that will be taught at Estabrook and the Cleveland Public Library at the triangle of State and Pearl call Ania Siuda at 440-290-9507. She is working out of the offices of Old Brooklyn CDC.

Old Brooklyn CDC is forming a "working group" of local people who have a set of skills around using the web and designing web sites, or communications and marketing in general. Please contact either Robyn Sandys or Christopher Lohr at 459-1000 if you are interested in participating.

Completely renovated home for sale in Old Brooklyn

by Robyn Sandys robyns@oldbrooklyn.com

If you are looking for a great home in a very central location, you found it at 4365 W. 50th St. It is located just south of Memphis Ave. in Old Brooklyn. The home is owned by the Old Brooklyn Community Development Corporation. You will be stepping inside a comfortable home that will look, feel and smell brand new! It has 3 bedrooms and 2 full bathrooms, plus a separate large dining room.

The CDC takes a lot of pride in the homes they rehab and this one is no exception. The kitchen has been renovated with new countertops and flooring as well as some added space. A brand new bathroom was added upstairs and the main level bath was upgraded. There is new carpeting throughout, new paint inside and out.

Plus, the 2-car garage had a major overhaul with new siding, roof and garage door. There is also a decent- sized fenced in yard.

The asking price is $87,500. Please call Robyn Sandys at 216-459-1000, ext. 208, for more information. This home will sell fast!

The Old Brooklyn Community Development Corporation would like to welcome two new businesses to the Memphis Fulton Shopping Center, Save-A-Lot and Classic Lanes.

Save-A-Lot

Save-a-Lot opened its doors at 4215 Fulton Rd. on September 9, 2010 The store is in the space formerly occupied by the Memphis Fulton Market.

Memphis Fulton Shopping Center, managed by Paran Management Company, worked closely with the City of Cleveland and the Old Brooklyn Community Development Corporation to secure the Save-A-Lot store. The City, through its councilmen and the park system was instrumental in bringing this business to Old Brooklyn.

At an open house event on Management Company's Chairman and CEO Joseph Shafran thanked Councilman Kevin Kelley and recognized Michael Cox for the City's cooperation with this project. Other nearby Save-A- Lot stores are at 3024 Clark Ave. and 2210 Brookpark Rd.

Classic Lanes

After 40 years of being known as Meszar Lanes, a bowling alley at 4231 Fulton Rd has a new name. Classic Lanes will be opening on Monday, October 4th.. Go down the stairs to find this hidden gem. While receiving a facelift, they have kept the "kitchy" feel and retained the warmth of the former bowling alley. Classic Lanes has completely rewired the bowling alley and is resurfacing the lanes. Eventually scoring will be automated, but for the time being, step back in time and score manually. There are 18 bowling lanes and various arcade games.

Classic Lanes will serve food such as hot dogs, chips and soft drinks. Check out their Facebook page, Classic Lanes Bowling Alley, to be kept updated on specials and additional menu items.

by Robyn Sandys robyns@oldbrooklyn.com

Rain finally decided to pour down in late September. We had such a great sunny summer. But no matter rain is good for our natural world and it helps to remember why we love the sun so much!

There is so much going on in Old Brooklyn and with the CDC. We have all sorts of houses that are being rehabbed and sold in our neighborhoods. On page 7 you will learn about the County Land Bank's homes they have redeveloped in our area. On the front page the CDC is nearly completed with a home we are rehabbing and selling. It is going to be a real find for a young family, single person or empty nesters. And there is another home just across the street from Old Brooklyn Community School that is being rehabbed by one of our qualified contractors. More on that home on the back page of the paper.

We have two major events in October. The first is our Annual Meeting on Tuesday, October 19th, at 6 p.m. It will be held Deaconess Krafft (more on the front page). The main purpose of this meeting is to let all know about our accomplishments this past year. It is free and open to the public, please join us!

On Saturday, October 23rd, is our 2nd Annual Old Brooklyn Community Fall-O-Ween. It goes from noon to 4 p.m. Trick or Treat bags filled with all kinds of goodies will be given out free to first 500 kids. Plus loads more, see the advertisement on page 1.

The areas Old Brooklyn Connected wireless project is moving along. A complete update starts on page 1. Remember staff is here to help you with your housing needs, or anything that will help to make your life in Old Brooklyn and Brooklyn Centre a better place to live! Ceud Mile Failte performs Celtic music around the city

by Paul Kirk Ceud Mile founder

The Cleveland area is home to many Celtic music bands, one of which performs original music written by Brooklyn Centre resident Paul Kirk.

Ceud Mile Failte (Scots Gaelic for "A Hundred Thousand Welcomes") was formed about a year ago to perform traditional favorites in addition to the 500+ Celtic style compositions Paul has written.

events at which Ceud Mile Failte has played this past summer were the Brooklyn Community Development Corporation's "Bridging the Distance" celebration in honor of the Fulton Road Bridge on June 13th, as well as all three 2010 Walk+Roll events.

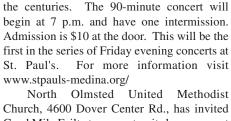

More recently they performed "My Joy and Delight, an evening of Celtic-inspired music to touch the senses and refresh the soul" Brooklyn Memorial United Methodist Church (BMUMC), 2607 Archwood Ave. It was part of an effort to raise awareness of the usable space in the church building.

BMUMC was built in 1911 and is a wellknown historic landmark to many Clevelanders. In addition to a beautiful, auditorium-like sanctuary illuminated by jeweltoned stained glass windows, there is also a 120-seat theater with a small stained glass skylight. This is an appropriate space for musical performances. The acoustics are very good and the space is cozy and intimate, yet ample.

On the humid evening of August 20th, approximately two-thirds of the seats were occupied by enthusiastic people clapping and singing to jigs, reels, waltzes and Celtic songs. Current pastor Reverend Pamela Buzalka was pleased with the attendance and hopes that the church can remain open as a community arts center.

In honor of World Communion Sunday, Ceud Mile Failte will perform with Irish Ceud Mile Failte to present a sit-down concert on Sunday, November 21st, at 7 p.m. The concert will approximately minutes and will have one 15-minute intermission. A free-will offering will be taken.

Ceud Failte will return to BMUMC to present a Celtic Christmas program early December.

Autumn officially arrived just over a week ago. To me it seemed that summer passed more quickly than usual because too many days were spent simply trying to survive the record heat.

Now, however, I'm hoping that the global warming trend we experienced continues, and that it'll be well into this month -- or next! -- before we need to rely on central heating again.

If you're reading this column within a few days of the Old Brooklyn News "hitting the newsstands", it won't be too late for you to take in two activities going on in Slavic Village this weekend

(Since the redistricting of Cleveland City Council, parts of Old Brooklyn share Councilman Tony Brancatelli with Slavic Village. Although it's on the east side of the Cuyahoga River, the neighborhood is not that far away.)

For the past several years we've promoted CityMusic Cleveland's concerts in the News & Events section of the paper. Although they ask for donations at their performances, held at churches throughout northeast Ohio, admission is free.

This week CityMusic opened its seventh season with an all-Beethoven program, and, as usual, one of the venues is in Slavic Village. On Saturday evening at 7:30 p.m., they will perform at Our Lady of Lourdes Church (OLOL), 3395 E. 53rd St., just south of Broadway Ave.

In the past, CityMusic's Slavic Village performances have been at the Shrine Church of St. Stanislaus, but this weekend, St. Stanislaus is holding its annual Polish Festival. So CityMusic asked the pastor of OLOL if this time they could perform there instead.

(See the listing in Church Notes on page 10 to read the details about the Polish Festival.)

We are also pleased to report that City Music will perform in Old Brooklyn, at Mary Queen of Peace Church (MQP), on Wednesday, May 18th, 2011.

And speaking of MQP, there were years when during the summer this column was almost exclusively devoted to student accolades. This summer, we didn't mention our students at all. So we'll finish this month with academic awards.

Last June, Mary Queen of Peace School was still Our Lady of Good Counsel School (OLGC), and the class of 2010 was the last to receive a diploma from a school with that name. A number of graduates were recognized at the commencement ceremony.

Our Lady of Good Counsel PTU (Parent Teacher Unit) awarded partial tuition scholarships to five grads who'd be attending Catholic high schools. The students, the amounts of their awards and the schools at which they are currently enrolled are:

Kayla Morris, $1000, St. Joseph Academy; Matthew Vargas, $1000, Benedictine High School; Michael Sadie, $750, Cleveland Central Catholic High School; Omar Meza, $625, Benedictine High School; and Gianna Branco, $625, Cleveland Central Catholic High School.

In addition to the PTU Scholarships, three OLGC eighth graders received memorial scholarships funded by individual families.

Louis Sadie and Lydia Sternik each received $500 Brian Himes Memorial Awards. Louis is now at Cleveland Central Catholic High School and Lydia is now at Holy Name High School.

OLGC's other Memorial Scholarship honors Darlene Brezovsky. This past year Michael Wells, now a student at Benedictine High School, received $500.

Ethnic and religious organizations from outside the parish also offer eighth graders scholarships based on their writing skills about assigned topics. In some instances, the selected essays have gone on to District and State competitions for higher recognition.

The Ladies Auxiliary of the Polish Legion of American Veterans awarded first place to an essay written by Kayla Morris (now a student at St. Joseph Academy); second place to Jordan Kay (now a student at Trinity High School) and third place to Matthew Vargas (now a student at Benedictine High School).

Being first place, Kayla's essay did, in fact, go to the State competition, where it ranked "second" in all of Ohio.

The Catholic Daughters of the Americas chose OLGC grad Antoinette Fuller, who's now attending St. Joseph Academy, as the recipient of their award.

BCN moving toward NWF certification

by Gloria Ferris Brooklyn Centre Naturalist

If you are a regular reader of the Brooklyn Centre Naturalists (BCN) articles that appear fairly regularly in the Old Brooklyn News, you are probably aware that one of the BCN's goals is to certify "Backyard Habitats" for the National Wildlife Federation (NWF). What you might not know is the reason for their working so diligently to collect more and more backyard habitats.

Three years ago, the BCN began a quest to become the first certified urban National Wildlife Community. Unfortunately for them, Austin, Texas was certified last year. So, they modified the goal to become the first urban NWF community east of the Mississippi River. Then this past summer Dublin, Ohio became certified.

The BCN subsequently decided that there was no reason to modify its goal because when the certified distinction is achieved, they will still be the only grass roots organization to have reached this milestone. Most of the certified communities up to this point have been driven by local governments and not by a group of neighbors and businesspeople. A goal matrix provided by the NWF guides the BCN in their quest.

Before they began amassing the points needed to become a wildlife community, BCN member Tom Romito led a facilitation process that set tasks and parameters to achieve the goals needed to become a NWF community. At that first meeting, the group set a timeframe of five years. Each year in September BCN members convene for an annual review and strategic planning session.

Along the way, the Brooklyn Centre Naturalists have collaborated with Brooklyn Memorial United Methodist Church, the Green Space Committee of the Old Brooklyn Community Development Corporation, the Brooklyn Branch of the Cleveland Public Library, the Brooklyn Centre Community Association and many neighbors, friends and businesspeople. They have received grants from Neighborhood Connections and ReImagining Cleveland. Soon, they will be applying for grants from the Ohio Department of Transportation (ODOT), Wild Schools, the Farm Bureau and other sources.

Last month, the BCN again convened under the direction of Mr. Romito. They were pleasantly surprised to find that they had achieved all goals necessary to apply for certification except one -- they still need two schools and sixty backyards to cross the last hurdle. BCN is asking for help from the community so that our area will become a certified National Wildlife Community.

If you are a gardener who invites butterflies and birds to your backyard, sign up on line at www.nwf.org/ or call 216-351-0254 for an application. For $20, you will receive the award-winning National Wildlife magazine, a NWF Backyard certificate and discounts on cards and gifts which are great for the holidays. Perhaps most importantly, you will put this community one step closer to certification.

Each year Old Brooklyn Community Development Corporation publishes an annual report for the previous fiscal year. Copies are available for all who would like to read it; it is also available on the Old Brooklyn CDC web site www.oldbrooklyn.com.

The annual report summarizes the status of the many programs the CDC manages and explains the finances that support the agency. The report does not get the same circulation as does Old Brooklyn News. The following article is the section of the report describing commercial services for fiscal year 2009-2010 (July 1, 2009 through June 30, 2010) that will be published later this month.

Commercial Services

If stability is strength during a down economic cycle, then the business community of Old Brooklyn and Brooklyn Centre is riding through the storm. The institutional employment centers like MetroHealth's Senior Health & Wellness Center, Cleveland Metroparks, Cleveland Metroparks Zoo and Cuvahoga County's Children and Family Services Center plus the areas twelve schools are maintaining jobs after a period of employment reduction. Jobs are essential to supporting small businesses in the community.

While Broadview Rd. lost two national franchise fast food restaurants, other local restaurants are afloat and managing. The reopening of the Fulton Road Bridge has helped local retailers on both sides of the Bridge, especially those in the Memphis-Fulton shopping district. Small business owners must be flexible and cautious as they adjust their product and service offering to weather the storm that is encompassing the national economy. Their flexibility, discipline and commitment to business are an important asset to the community. Making payroll every week is very hard work. For the most part, it is happening throughout Brooklyn Centre and Old Brooklyn.

The Krather Building remains on the market. It continues to draw interest from developers who understand the importance of the tax credits associated with historic preservation. Just like the many years it took the Detroit Shoreway CDC to restore the Capitol Theatre, Old Brooklyn CDC is committed to working with the owners to find a suitable purchaser.

The RTA garage also remains an important goal for creative redevelopment. There are not too many developers interested in a fiveacre site with 117,000 square foot garage, but Old Brooklyn CDC will continue to search for that niche opportunity.

Storefront Renovation Program

Convincing commercial property owners to invest in exterior improvements to their buildings is a hard task. The Cleveland Storefront Renovation program provides either a 40 % rebate or low-cost loans for exterior renovations and signage for older commercial buildings. Wee Kare Day Care on Broadview Rd. is under contract and expects to complete the restoration by the end of 2010. Two other businesses have submitted preliminary applications and expect to be under contract in fiscal year 2010-2011.

Business and Institutional Support

The OBCDC commercial manager assisted 124 individual businesses on a wide variety of issues including zoning changes, business planning, operational challenges, marketing, expansion, leasing, building code compliance, security, neighbor relations and exit strategies. Ten of those businesses received assistance in the all important area of start up, expansion or retention.

The commercial manager informs businesses about city and county financial assistance programs that can help a business expand, relocate or even start a new business. The manager is the liaison to the Near West Design and Review Committee and the Brooklyn Centre Historic District Design and Review Committee. The manager helps commercial property owners and business operators navigate the various departments of Cleveland city government with respect to permits, zoning and city loans. The position functions as a business generalist that can match the resources with the opportunity.

Business Promotion

Networking and promotion is essential to business growth. To that end a group of Old Brooklyn merchants organized a business promotion event in conjunction with the All Access Home and Bicycle Tour. They sponsored two bicycle-oriented events: Pedal for Prizes and Bicycle Poker. These two events brought new cyclists to Old Brooklyn or brought residents to local businesses for the first time. This also served to identify the Old Brooklyn commercial corridors as the "Gateway to the Zoo".

There was also local business support for the October 2009 Falloween Festival and the June 2010 Bridging the Distance Run for the new Fulton Road Bridge.

Over the past several years there has been an informal breakfast gathering of small business owners once a month. These are casual conversations about doing business in the community. New business relationships have been born as a result of this gathering.

One of the informal outcomes was the window theme decorations of straw and mums in October of 2009, followed by the poinsettia displays for the winter holiday season.

The two presentations in March 2010 by Team NEO were a result of the casual conversation emanating from this breakfast gettogether. And, of course, good networking creates new business opportunities.

Maintaining Commercial Property

There are two primary tools Old Brooklyn CDC uses to work to keep commercial properties maintained: the local "design and review" committee process and commercial code enforcement.

The Design and Review Committee insures that in a designated area, all exterior changes to buildings and parking lots are approved by the local committee. The purpose is to see that changes meet building code, are compatible with the architecture of the building, and do not visibly detract from the neighboring buildings. There is one design and review committee for Old Brooklyn and another committee for Brooklyn Centre. In the 2009-2010 fiscal year six businesses presented plans that were approved, and none were Commercial code enforcement is actual visual inspection of the exterior of commercial buildings and if conditions warrant, requesting an official inspection from the Cleveland Department of Building and Housing. This tool is often used as an informative action that lets property owners know about deteriorating building conditions and assistance that may be available to correct problems.

Friends of Big Creek now has own space

by Mary Ellen Stasek Chairman, Friends of Big Creek

The Town Crier column of the July issue of the Old Brooklyn News stated that architect John Rakauskas had a forthcoming announcement regarding the new office space he now occupies upstairs at 4352 Pearl Rd. (at Brooklyn Ave.).

This month it's time to make the announcement -- The larger accommodations have allowed John to share some space with Friends of Big Creek (FOBC).

Friends of Big Creek was organized more than five years ago and has used various community meeting rooms for its gatherings. Now they have a desk, storage space for maps and documents, and best of all, a place for board meetings and other small get-togethers. Having a base of operations is a welcome change for members of this largely volunteer

FOBC's mission is "to conserve, enhance, and bring recognition to the natural and historic resources of the Big Creek Watershed and develop a recreational trail network that joins these resources to each other and the commu-

Friends of Big Creek is hoping to receive endorsement of the recently completed Big Creek Balanced Growth Watershed Management Plan by the Ohio Lake Erie Commission soon (possibly by the end of the year). The Plan provides a framework for protecting and restoring the watershed to assure long-term economic competitiveness, ecological health and quality of life.

Defining areas where FOBC wants to support redevelopment and where they want to support conservation is one strategy which will help them achieve these goals. As the Plan's name states, it's a "balance" and recommends that they follow models and standards for best practices in local land use decision-making.

In addition to regular creek clean-ups and public presentations and forums, there are a number of projects in FOBC's hopper. Check the website, www.friendsofbigcreek.org to keep abreast of meetings and activities.

FOBC is always looking for input. Anyone interested in learning more or becoming involved can drop a line to info@friendsofbigcreek.org or call FOBC Project Manager Bob Gardin at 216-269-6472.

Friends of Big Creek would also be happy to make a presentation to a class or group explaining the watershed approach to managing land and water resources. Use the email or phone number in the preceding paragraph to set that up, too.

New program eases solar buying for Cleveland homeowners

On August 31, One Block off The Grid (1BOG) launched Cleveland's first ever solar group purchase program. Offering homeowners a unique opportunity to buy solar at a fixed group discount rate for the duration of the 3month the 1BOG program, solar advisors provide personalized information and support throughout the entire process.

"We are excited to help jump-start the Cleveland solar market," said Dave Llorens, CEO of One Block Off the Grid. "Tax incentives and rebates are so strong in Cleveland, solar systems can now pay for themselves in 3-4 years with our group discount. Going solar is one of the easiest ways for homeowners to save money on their electricity bills."

1BOG spent a month investigating local Cleveland installers and then selected Astrum Solar as program partner to service the entire group's installations.

One Block Off the Grid's Cleveland program will run through November 30, 2010. To sign up for the free program, visit 1BOG's website at www.SolarCleveland.1BOG.org.

Free tutoring for Cleveland students by Marie Suma, Program Manager, Knowledge College, Inc.

Knowledge College, Inc. provides free after-school reading and math tutoring for eligible students in Cleveland Metropolitan School District (CMSD). Last year in the Old Brooklyn/Brooklyn Centre area, Knowledge College tutored at William Cullen Bryant, Benjamin Franklin, Charles A. Mooney and Denison elementary schools and James F. Rhodes High School.

(William Cullen Bryant was taken off this year's list of eligible schools because they've met federal and City standards for excellence for multiple years.)

The Knowledge College program offers students in grades K-10 thirty hours of free tutoring throughout the school year. The goal is to help students improve their reading or math skills and prepare them for the Ohio Achievement Assessment (OAA).

After the initial enrollment period, students will be pre-tested to determine weaknesses so that a customized learning plan can be created for each student. Once the School District and parents approve the learning plan, tutoring can get stated, which usually takes place from December to April.

Tutoring will be administered in the student's school building directly after dismissal for one hour Monday through Thursday by highly qualified tutors who have passed a thorough background check. The tutors will be guided by curriculum specifically designed to help each student meet the goals listed on his/her learning plan.

It's easy for parents to sign-up their children. The CMSD started to mail enrollment forms to eligible students on September 27th, and they should be arriving in mail boxes over the next two weeks. The mailing will be delivered in a blue or yellow envelope. It is important that parents check all mail from the school district because the application might be included with other paperwork.

Each application has the individual student's name on it. Parents desiring to pursue tutoring with Knowledge College must designate it as their first choice, sign the application form and mail it back in the enclosed envelope. Students will be accepted into the program on a first-come, first-served basis by CMSD. It is important that the envelope be returned immediately since there are 30,000 eligible students but only 4500 available spots.

After the school district notifies Knowledge College that a child has been approved for the program, a phone call will be made to the parents to explain the details of the program and when the tutoring will begin.

Parents who have any questions about tutoring or the enrollment process, should call 216-771-1428 or visit www.knowledgecollegeinc.com to see if a child is eligible.

Halloween pranks these days quite tame compared to those of yesteryear

by Lynette Filips lynettef@oldbrooklyn.com

Love it or hate it, on October 31st it'll be Halloween again. The festivity has been around for a very long time, having roots in ancient Roman, Celtic and Catholic religious rituals as well as European folk traditions.

One of the Roman festivals of the dead, Lemuria, took place at roughly the same time as Halloween. Another, Feralia, took place on February 21st; Roman citizens brought food offerings to the tombs of their deceased ancestors.

Because the Celts thought that the dead could return to the earth on the feast they called Samhain (summer's end), they lit bonfires and wore costumes to ward off the roaming ghosts. The festivities lasted over several days, but were most intense October 31st to November 1st.

Roman (western) Catholics have celebrated All Saints' Day on November 1st since the seventh/eighth centuries, and All Souls' Day on November 2nd since before the Protestant Reformation. Halloween is the "All Hallows Eve" of All Saints Day.

In the 1800s, Halloween began to lose its religious connotation and became more of a secular children's holiday. But even the secular practices have changed a lot during the past two centuries.

To reminisce about Halloween in the early years of my writing historical features for the Old Brooklyn News (1991, 1992 and 1993), I talked to a number of neighborhood old-timers about how they'd observed the holiday in their younger days. I also recalled letters from a great-uncle about Halloween pranks he'd pulled when he was growing up in rural Ohio (Norwalk) more than a hundred years ago.

By now those fellows have all passed on to the next life, but thankfully through this publication, I was able to preserve their Halloween tricks – and even a few from the ladies – forever. I've decided that enough time has passed for the best of them to be resurrected.

This year, our November issue will also be published in October, two days before Halloween. So the history articles in both our October and our November issues will recount Halloween lore.

Mention past Halloween pranks, and "outhouse" is often the first word which comes to folks' minds. Whether they lived in the city or the country, until a hundred years ago (less than that in some parts of America), outhouses were a reality of life.

The most benign Halloween stories involve tipping over outhouses. More complex was tipping over an outhouse (accidentally or on purpose) with a person in it. Even more daring was using a long weed to tickle the rear end of a person while he/she was seated in the outhouse

In addition to being tipped over, outhouses were also moved to different sites on Halloween. Perhaps that meant being pushed down a hill, but it might also have meant being put on top of another building, like a shed.

Rural boys were busy moving other things on Halloween night, too, most notably farmers' hay wagons. These, too, might have ended up on top of a barn or shed. Then, just as the boys had to figure out how to get them up there (perhaps by dismantling them first), farmers who'd been "pranked" had to figure out how to get them down again.

Early on, even our "South Brooklyn" section of Cleveland was quite rural; a blacksmith shop was on Broad St., now the corner of Broadview Rd. and W. 24th St., where Auburn Cleaners is currently located. In addition to shoeing horses, the blacksmith there also repaired farmers' wagons.

It happened that a grouchy old farmer lived on the north end of Valley Rd., and grouchy people were victimized on Halloween more often than nice people were. One year, a group of boys "borrowed" a wagon from the blacksmith shop and pulled it south along Broadview Rd., stopping at almost every house along the way, filling it with peoples' porch furniture. Then they quickly unloaded all the furniture on the lawn of the grouchy Valley Rd. farmer.

The spare wagon wheels which the blacksmith stockpiled in his yard were also useful to Halloween pranksters. The blacksmith worked on the farm wagons on the roof of his building, and the roof was accessed by an outdoor ramp which ran parallel to W. 24th St.

On Halloween, boys rolled the wheels up to the roof and then let go down the ramp.

Most of the wheels rolled down the street, but a few of them ended up on the porches of nearby houses.

the blacksmith shop were also utilized on Halloween. Year-round, even girls slung them at bullies, but on Halloween, the turds were put into bags and left on front porches. Sometimes they were even set on fire. It was never good to step on such a bag accidentally, and it was even worse to stomp on such a bag to extinguish a fire.

With the passage of time, of course, there were no longer hay wagons for city boys to move around, but there were plenty of other items for them to use – bicycles, wooden front steps and entire sets of porch furniture.

Apparently city boys didn't limit their frivolity to one night, either. One now-deceased, totally responsible Old Brooklyn man told me that in the 1920s, the pranks went on for the whole week before Halloween, and that the boys gave each night a different name, according to its theme – porch night, garbage night, doorbell night, tomato night, cabbage night, etc.

On the morning after porch night, one might find his/her wicker porch furniture on the neighbor's porch, on the porch roof, on top of the garage, dangling from one of the spikes going up the side of a telephone pole, or, as happened at least once, on the flagpole at Riverside Cemetery.

Back porches might also be targeted on that night. Housewives who accidentally left their metal laundry wash tubs out may have discovered that they'd been pelted by BBs.

Garbage cans were the focus of garbage night. The next day residents may have found theirs on their front porches, or, worse yet, emptied on their front lawns.

There were several versions of doorbell night pranks. The simplest was to ring the doorbell and run. Another was to ring the bell and leave something behind (e.g., a dummy looking in the door). Yet another was to jam the doorbell with a straight pin so that the button stayed in and the bell kept ringing.

Perhaps the most sophisticated version of the doorbell prank was to tie the front door knob to a porch rail or post (there were no storm doors in those days) and then ring the doorbell. When the occupant came to the door and tried to open it, he was unable to do so.

On tomato night and cabbage night, people's vegetable gardens were raided and the produce tossed at the houses. Cleaning up the mess the next day wasn't pleasant, but at least it didn't smell as bad as houses which had been "egged" did.

We'll save the other half of the pranks for Part II. Meanwhile, if you think of something you did in your younger days which you want to be sure if among the pranks we recount, please contact me by phone, fax, e-mail or snail mail at the Old Brooklyn News.

As I see it... by Pastor Jerry

Norman Cousins was asked to speak to cancer patients in a hospital. He told a story about losing a quarter in a pay phone. "Operator," he said, "I put a quarter in this phone and lost it." "Sir," she responded, "if you give me your name and address, we'll mail the coin to you." Cousins objected, saying that was unacceptable. "Why don't you just return my quarter to me now?"

She repeated the offer and asked if he had pushed the coin-return plunger. He hadn't. When he did, the pay phone spewed out nearly Four Dollars!

The operator said, "Sir, will you please put the coins back into the phone?" Cousins replied, "Madam, if you give me your name and address, I will gladly mail the coins to you!"

The patients exploded in laughter at Cousins' story. Then a physician asked, "How many of you entered this room in pain?" More than half raised their hands. "How many of you in the past few minutes had less or no pain?" The same people again raised their hands.

Laughter is one of the best medica-

"A merry heart does good, like medicine, but a broken spirit dries the bones.'

Proverbs 17:22

The Society of St. Vincent De Paul's Food Pantry, formerly located in the Biddulph Plaza and currently on Ridge Rd. (several streets northeast of Memphis Ave.), again finds itself in need of a new building because the one in which they are presently operating is in foreclosure. OBCDC's Commercial Manager is working with them to find a suitable location. In addition to sufficient interior space, ample parking space is also necessary. Call OBCDC if you are aware of an option for them 216-459-1000.

The Boy Scouts from Mary Queen of Peace Church sponsored a classic car show in the church's back parking lot on Saturday, September 11th. Two James Ford Rhodes High School freshman football players, (left - right) Ronald Johnson and Josh Pierzchaia, posed next to Bruce Rekowski's 1966 Chevrolet "Chevelle" with a 502 motor blown with nitrous.

The summer 2010 growing season is winding down, and it was generally so hot and so dry that many gardeners were disappointed in the return they received for their efforts this year. But not Erich and Lucy Neumann of 4125 W. 50th St.! Early in the season they purchased cherry tomato plants at Old Brooklyn Greenhouse and Garden Center (4646 W. 11th St., between W. Schaaf Rd. and Spring Rd.) and planted them in their back vard. The plants grew to a height of twelve feet, and yielded many tomatoes.

Foster Pointe Senior Apartment Homes is a new 61-unit, three-story, affordable senior housing development at 2000 Denison Ave. in Brooklyn Centre. It opened mid-summer.

Foster Pointe residents enjoy amenities such as spacious one- and two-bedroom apartments; convenient, barrier-free floor plan designs; a community room with kitchenette and covered patio; laundry facilities on each floor; internal trash collection system; a fully-equipped kitchen with range, refrigerator, disposal, dishwasher and breakfast bar; abundant closet space; cable TV and internet ready computer center with high-speed internet; resident library; outdoor gazeboes and benches; regularly scheduled activities and social events; professional on-site management; and a 3-story design elevator.

Foster Pointe exceeds the Enterprise Green Community Program Standards, the nation's premier standard for green and environmentally healthy affordable housing. It includes numerous green development features -- upgraded insulation, energy-efficient windows, Energy Star appliances and an advanced light package. Thus residents benefit from the utility savings as well as rent.

Ben Franklin gardeners and guests enjoyed many dishes containing garden produce at their Harvest Picnic potluck on Saturday, September 11th, at the Benjamin Franklin Community Garden. Gardeners also recognized the 10-year anniversary of Garden Coordinator Tom Sargent and re-elected Lisa Young to a three-year term on the Garden Committee. The gardeners also elected Jan Papez, Kim Hageman and Mike Theus to full terms and Bruce Page to complete the final year of a three-year term. A 50/50 raffle netted $160 to Dolly Smith and the Garden Committee's Operating Fund. At the close of the picnic, the Garden Committee re-elected officers for one-year terms: John Jenkins, chairman; Jeff Kostura, vice chairman; Kim Repinski, treasurer; and Lisa Young, secretary. At press-time the Garden was half-way toward its 2010 goal of donating 6,000 pounds of produce to the needy. Recent donations included a 22-pound Hubbard squash. The Garden will close for the season on Sunday, October 17th. Brushhogging and plowing to prepare the ground for next season is scheduled to take place October 25th-26th, weather permitting.
